1. You serve on the boards of the Miami-Dade Cultural Affairs Counsel and the American Red Cross of Greater Miami & Keys, and have been involved with numerous charities and not-for-profit organizations in the community for more than 20 years. Why is “giving back” so important to you?

Our Catholic faith guides my family and me; it is our foundation and in turn calls us to give back. I learned from those principals taught to me at an early age and I continue to live by these teachings daily.

2. What are a few resources you would recommend to someone looking to volunteer in their community?

Be true to your beliefs. Support a cause that is intrinsic to your principals, and maintain a strong sense of principles and values that should drive any and all philanthropic decisions.

3. Can you name a person who has had a tremendous impact on you as a professional and philanthropist? Why and how did this person impact your life?

I have had the honor of working with many great men & women throughout my professional career. Senator Claude Pepper, Senator Bob Dole and Joe Klock were all great mentors and friends. As a philanthropist, my dear friend Ruth Shack has been a pillar in the Miami-Dade community for decades. Her tireless work is inspiring.

4. What did you learn at STU that is helping you in your career and life as a leader in your community?

My Catholic faith plays a leading role in all the daily decisions I make. The leadership skills I developed at STU have served as guiding principles leading me to share my blessings amongst our community. St. Thomas University maintains a pivotal presence in my on-going professional and philanthropic endeavors. The leadership education I obtained as a young man has been the groundwork for my successful business and community partnerships.

5. If you could go back in time, what advice would you give yourself after graduating from college?

I would tell my young self, never to derail from your faith; the world will test you and place many obstacles in your path but it will be your faith that will give you the strength to succeed, and defeat any interference throughout your life's journey.
